Children's Commissioner - School Ambassadors

Ambassadors are a scheme we run in primary schools across Wales.

Two children are elected by the other children in the school to be ambassadors.

There are three main things an ambassador does:

1. Tell children in their school about the Children's Commissioner for Wales
2. Tell children in their school all about children's rights and the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child
3. With the school council, find out what children in the school think could be made better and then work with other people in the school to change things.

The ambassadors get a toolkit with lots of ideas in it about how to do their tasks, and they get lots of help to do these things from their teachers.

Download the Ambassadors toolkit.

Download teacher's notes for the Ambassadors scheme.

Know Your Rights Game

This is an interactive game about the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC).

Every child and young person under 18 has rights. These rights are in one big list called the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Your challenge is to explore the community map collecting all your rights along the way. You must visit all four areas on the map and complete each challenge, to get across to the star-shaped island. Here you will collect your 'Know Your Rights' personalised certificate as proof that you know all your rights.

You can also read a text version of the game and a full list of rights.
